A stave is a strong stick, especially one that is used as a weapon. Usually used by mages.

Common stave weapons

- Staff: It might just be a glowy stick to a non-magic user but a staff amplifies a mage's power, letting them use more magic than normal by providing a buffer between them and Chaos, while also serving a focus for their magic..
- Hooked Staff: According to Mage stories this design was based off an old design the mage Alzur used. Turns out Alzur used the hook on the end of the staff to shepherd the beasts he wouldd make. Though his was probably silver but it's still a useful weapon for those mages that practice staff fighting.
- Iron Staff: Sometimes a mage might need a bit more protection or their magic may fail them. In that case they have an iron staff. Basically it's just a big rod of iron with fifth essence coursing through it. Sturdier than a normal staff and hits like a mace. Mages can even block blades with it a bit.
- Crystal Staff: Best mages carry crystal staves. They're pretty much like regular staves but they have gemstones at the top of them, embedded in the wood. Thing about the gem is it has to be perfect. If the gem has even on crack or imperfection, they risk an explosion or something of the like. They're worth it though. Amplifies magic like nothing else known in the world.

- Dispelling Rod: This is a solid rod of silver etched with magical runes. It has to power to disrupt spirit manifestations, driving them away, and to dispel magic it touches.
- Gnomish Staff: Gnomish staves, just like any gnomish craft, are tremendously impressive. They're made of dark, stained wood with custom carving from top to bottom. Usually have gems embedded in them somewhere.
- Elvish Walking Stick: Elven sages used these years and years ago. They're much smaller than the average staff, maybe chest height at tallest. Beautiful designs of braided silk and gold, but the important part is how well they focus magic.

Notable stave weapons

- Navigator Staff
- Sinistorix- The Iron Conqueror
- Staff of Death King Arawn: The personal magic staff of the Archfey King of the Winter Court, it is made of Night Ash wood specially treated to act as a conduit for Arawn's powers.
- Succubus' Wand
